We herewith place before the public a catalogue of books printed in the English language.

We would draw special attention to the following items:

Caxton's "Royal Book",
Chippendale's „Gentleman & Cabinet Maker's Director", 3rd Edn.,
Fielding's "Tom Jones", lst Edn.
Goldsmith's "Vicar of Wakefield", lst Edn.,
Wynkyn de Wordes "Lives" of the Fathers.

and emphasise the fact that this catalogue represents but a fraction of the works in our possession relating to Great Britain, America, and English Literature. We have a further large stock of Americana, rare and old works on English Literature and History, Medicine, Astronomy, Heraldry, Theology, &c., &c., (in Latin, French, German, and other languages) catalogues of which will be gladly forwarded on application; a list of the same will be found opposite.

After 53 year's experience, we have arrived at a system which enables us to produce almost immediately any one of the more than one million books, manuscripts, and prints we have in stock, and a hearty invitation for a personal inspection is extended to all such as may be visiting our country at any future date.

We shall be greatly obliged if the reader will, after perusal, pass this catalogue on to any of his friends to whom it may be of interest.

Fine clean presentation copy from the author to the Prince Archbishop of Trêves, reference to which town is made on p. 51. On two pp. is a long Ms. note about the author. "The author of this very curious and madly mystical book, played an important part in the early history of Georgia. In 1751, when he was 33 years old he came over to the new world with 160 German colonists and eleven months after 160 more came, all being relations and acquaintances. He established the flourishing settlement of Bethany in Georgia in 1752 and busied himself in surveys and fortifications. In 1755 he fortified Charlestown, in 1756 built Fort London, in 1757 fortified Savannah and in the same year published the first map of S. Carolina and Georgia."

On the 26. June 1764 he was appointed His Majesty's Surveyor General of the Southern District of North America which he held till 1772. In 1772 he published the Atlantic Pilot printed at London, and dedicated to the Earl of Hillsborough, Secretary of State for America. When Brahm came to Georgia in 1751 he says there were very few English except those in Government employ, and very few negro servants, not more than 3 dozen and about 1500 Salzburg Emigrants. Brahm says his own Germans were a poor lot, "very few well built attitudes and much less likely faces, spoke no English after many years, schools and Divine Service both in German." In 1798 "in my 81 of age" as he says, he wrote to the High Commissioners of the Treasury, thanking them for past favours, but mentioning that he had been left improvided for from 1783 to 1798 and gives notice that he has delivered up to Phineas Bond consul general of Great Britain for the States of America four folio vols. of surveys. The third is now in the Library of Harvard College and in 1849. Mr. George Wymberley-Jones printed 49 copies in fol. privately at Wormsloe. Mr. Wymberley-Jones does not seem to know anything of Brahm's mystical writings or of this book which must be very rare, not being in any of the great English Libraries."

1355a [Victoria, Queen.] Correspondance relating to the continental travels of Queen Victoria from 1881—1893. Collected by E. Dosse, courier to the Queen. Also letters relating to the journey of Sir Fleetwood Edwards to the Coburg wedding. Comprising 81 documents and 8 photographs, viz. The Queen and Prince Consort, surrounded by family, The Queen, Prince Consort, and Prince of Wales, The Queen, The Queen 1859, The Queen with Prince Consort 1859, The Queen (coloured photo.) 1860, The Queen with Princess Beatrice, 1861, The same in another position, The Queen 1861. 500 —

An extraordinary collection; allowing one to look behind the scenes upon the journeys made from 1881 to 1893. Full of interesting trivialities. On one occasion hope is expressed that the outrider is in good health, as the last time, Her Majesty remarked that he was looking unwell; he was suffering from boils. One high official writes from Windsor Castle, excusing himself for not remitting 16 frs., as he does not know its equivalent in English money. Another writes asking "If the Queen were to travel from Flushing to Bordighera, through what foreign countries should we pass?" (!) The whole of the correspondance shows that very little initiative existed in those surrounding the Queen, and everything seems to have been conducted in a very unbusinesslike manner.
